CBD's Involvement in Joint Health

Originating from the cannabis plant, cannabidiol (CBD) is a non-psychoactive chemical. Its possible medicinal qualities—anti-inflammatory and pain-relieving ones among others—have attracted a lot of interest. CBD interacts with the endocannabinoid system (ECS), a sophisticated network of receptors and neurotransmitters controlling many body processes including inflammation and pain sensation.

By suppressing the synthesis of pro-inflammatory cytokines and hence encouraging the release of anti-inflammatory cytokines, studies have demonstrated how CBD can lower inflammation. CBD's dual effect qualifies it as a potential treatment for inflammation and joint discomfort.
