The Science Supporting CBD

Knowledge of CBD and its relationship with the human body is necessary to fully appreciate the advantages of Cbdynamax Pro CBD Gummies for fitness enthusiasts. Within the cannabis plant are more than 100 cannabinoids, including CBD. CBD does not cause a "high," as does THC. Rather, it communicates with the body's endocannabinoid system (ECS), a sophisticated cell-signaling system that controls a range of physiological functions, including as hunger, mood, pain perception, and immunological response.

Endocannabinoids, enzymes and receptors make up the ECS. All throughout the body exist the two main receptors, CB1 and CB2. The brain and central nervous system are home to most CB1 receptors; peripheral organs and immune cells are more likely to have CB2 receptors. Through interactions with these receptors, CBD affects how well the ECS keeps the body in balance and homeostasis.
